AFRICAN

with and from young people in Africa

info@chanceforafricanyouth.org

We are people of all ages, gender, origin, professional background, and personal experiences in African countries.

Through our involvement in education and training projects the idea was born to promote and assist well organized projects. We are convinced that aid can only stimulate sustainable development if it supports local people's own ideas and initiatives.

Our aim is to promote autonomous development and responsibility.

We intend to support young people as they are the great hope. With their creativity, motivation, and commitment they get a chance for further development.

Due to our aims, we promote and support local institutions and projects for vocational schools and school education, that came into existence from individual initiative.

We enable:

- Start-up funding for new projects
- Grants for acquisitions
- Expansion support for temporary projects
- Advice and assistance, also on theoretical basics
- Networking with other projects and groups

Our criteria:

- Training and educational opportunities for young people
- Traceability and sustainability of funding
- No permanent funding

KUJWE DEVELOPMENT TRUST

in Siabuwa, Zimbabwe

The Kujwe Developmet Trust (KDT) was founded in 2017 in Siabuwa (Binga District), one of the driest and least developed areas of Zimbabwe, by the Tonga minority living there.

Their initiative aims to:

- Empowering vulnerable children through improved access to education
- Expand livelihood opportunities for women
- Improve health services

Various projects have already been realised:

- Bicycles for the girls whose way to school is longer than 6 km
- A laboratory for the school has been set up
- A tree nursery has been established
- As there is no access to the internet, a library was set up during the lockdown

Currently, four wells have been drilled and two tanks built for each of three schools, a clinic and the neighbouring settlements. Solar-powered pumps are still needed for this.

We want to support this project and others that arise from the KDT's own initiative.

DIGI-MECHANICS-SCHOOL

in Accra, Ghana

offers courses in digital car repair in its different variants.

The courses are addressed at workshop owners in the informal sector, trained mechanics, and apprentices. Addressed are young people who are interested in analysing digital defects of cars with the help of IT-technology to support the existing mechanics.

Initially, two 5-day courses will be offered:

„Basic Course“ and „Advanced Course“.

During the courses, cars are analysed and repaired for a fee. This income is not enough to finance the initial phase, but it will be able to sustain the operation of the courses in the future.

During the first 6 months, German experts will train the future Ghanaian seminar trainers. Through this multiplier effect, many mechanics can be trained.

Thank you for your interest in our association and our work, which is carried out on a voluntary basis. The realisation of our goals can only be achieved many helpers, supporters, donors and sponsors.

All donations to us are tax deductible in Germany. For a donation receipt please state your address or e-mail address.
